This is not a guide for people looking for a polite meal. This is a guide for people who agree that, sometimes, chairs aren't just for sitting and mid-dinner photoshoots are perfectly acceptable. While food is important, a good time takes priority at these places. They're not rabbit-and-a-top-hat kind of fun. No, they range from old-school classics where you can dance with a grandparent to hot and geotag-heavy new spots. They're the "it" dinners of Miami, and exactly where you want to be this weekend.

If you want dinner to involve a martini, live music, and some candles, there are frustratingly few options in Miami. But at least we have the Gibson Room. The Coral Way spot is certainly fun on account of its cocktails and music programming. But its atmosphere is a nice mix of casual and upscale, which makes this a really good option if you're looking for something to do on a Saturday night that doesn't require a reservation. You can keep it simple with an excellent cheeseburger, or go fancy and order a tamal en cazuela with foie gras and duck chicharron. After you eat, get up and mingle at the bar for as long as you like.
